Chrome reigns supreme as Safari and IE Pwn2Owned

Posted on Mar 10th 2011 by Trent Nouveau

Google's Chrome browser reigned supreme on Thursday as hackers at the Pwn2Owned conference successfully exploited Apple's Safari and Microsoft's Internet Explorer.

Vupen - a French security company - managed to crack Safari 5 running on a MacBook Air notebook in just five seconds.

Meanwhile, independent researcher Stephen Fewer exploited at least three vulnerabilities to hack through IE8's digital defenses on Windows 7.

However, the teams scheduled to take on Google's $20,000 Chrome challenge failed to show up.

"The first contestant (Moatz Khader) was a no-show," Aaron Portnoy, manager of HP

TippingPoint's security research team, told ComputerWorld.

"And the other team (Anon) wanted to work on their BlackBerry vulnerability. So it doesn't look like anyone will try Chrome."

Leet Speak

Leet (or "1337"), also known as eleet or leetspeak, is an alternative alphabet for the English language that is used primarily on the Internet. It uses various combinations of ASCII characters to replace Latinate letters. For example, leet spellings of the word leet include 1337 and 133t; eleet may be spelled 31337 or 3133t.

Habituation and OMT

- Habituation is the decrease in response to a stimulus after repeated exposure to that stimulus over time.
- The longer something is in your field of vision, the less likely you are to notice it.

 Having 36 different announcements in every edition of OMT has the same effect.

Habituation and OMT

 "Do not show" option deletes announcements from your list.

"Contents & New Items" highlights only the new ones.
