During TACIT training this year we announced a contest to win an Apple iPod (donated by SAP). Participants in the contest were to submit some type of project that they had created which showed an outstanding use of technology in the classroom (for example: a PowerPoint presentation, a video project, etc.). It was our intention that the Instructional Technology Standing committee judge the submissions to determine a winner.

A good many faculty expressed interest in the contest, but fewer submissions were received than were expected. The committee reviewed the submissions, and voted that Laura Antonow's project "Art and Architecture" should be our contest winner.

Penny will notify Laura that she may pick up her Apple iPod from the FTDC.
