The treble clef is used on the upper staves to save space. This is a non-transposing treble clef. The written pitch is the same as the sounding pitch. The differences between compensating and non-compensating instruments on fourth-valve combinations are clearly indicated.